JUKI won the design right infringement lawsuit of its industrial sewing machine in China

The Shanghai High People's Court ordered the Zhejiang Gemsy Sewing Machine co., Ltd. (hereinafter referred to as "Gemsy") that has used the design right of the JUKI industrial sewing machine without notice to perform the payment of the compensation for infringement of design right to JUKI.

In the first and second trials, the Gemsy tried repeatedly to place responsibility for infringement of design right on the Suzhou Wangping Sewing Equipment co., Ltd. a subcontracting company. But the Shanghai No.1 Intermediate People's Court and the Shanghai High People's Court turned down Gemsy's allegations, and authorized that the Gemsy, an outsourcing company, had legal responsibility.

JUKI maintains fair competition in the market economy, thinks it is important to protect consumers' rights and interests, and continues to work toward the protection of intellectual property rights.
